WELCOME TO ASSEMBLY 2000

Dr. Chung
Hwan Kwak,
Chairman, IIFWP

It is my distinct honor to extend a warm welcome to so many distinguished world leaders and IIFWP delegates from around the world, representing more than 120 nations. Assembly 2000 has as its theme, "Renewing the United Nations and Building a Culture of Peace."

The IIFWP is dedicated to promoting the founding ideals of the United Nations, while also encouraging greater participation among other non-governmental organizations in the pursuit of solutions to world problems.

Assembly 2000, like many other very important gatherings taking place during this millennial year, will consider many critical issues facing humanity at this time in history. In many respects we stand at a turning point, a time of incredible opportunity. Assembly 2000 seeks not only to develop and advance the institutional goals of the IIFWP, but to make an offering, through the resulting publications and the development of international networks, that can be of use to the United Nations and the world community.

I want to thank our Chairman, Ambassador Wibisono, of the Permanent Mission of Indonesia, the Co-Chairs, and all those who have worked so hard to put this Assembly 2000 together. In addition, along with my welcome, let me extend my appreciation to each of you who have gathered here from distant lands for the purpose of serving the cause of world peace.

May God bless you, your family and your work.

Sincerely yours,

Dr. Chung Hwan Kwak
Chairman, IIFWP

H.E. Ambassador
Makarim Wibisono,
*Chairman, Assembly

This year marks a significant moment in the history of the United Nations.

A wide range of international gatherings are taking place throughout the world, and especially here in New York where the United Nations has its headquarters. There is widespread interest and hope in the prospect of renewing the United Nations and making a new start toward achieving the noble goals laid out more than 50 years ago.

None other than the Secretary General himself, His Excellency Kofi Annan, has encouraged all of us, both the representatives of the member states and the wider NGO community, to consider the ways in which we can begin this new century with a vision and a strategy that will yield great benefits for those we are here to serve, the peoples of the world.

I am very pleased that the Interreligious and International Federation for World Peace, along with other organizations, have called this Assembly 2000 to focus on the theme, "Renewing the United Nations and Building a Culture of Peace." I believe we have created a unique and substantial program which will make a significant contribution to the discussions taking place this year.

Let me welcome all the participants and extend my warm wishes that your time here at Assembly 2000 will be productive and enriching.

Sincerely yours,

H.E. Ambassador Makarim Wibisono
Chairman, Assembly 2000;
Permanent Representative of the Republic of Indonesia to the United Nations

ORIGINS OF IIFWP

Throughout his entire life, with a ministry spanning more than fifty years, the Rev. Sun Myung Moon has devoted himself to the pursuit of peace. He has established numerous organizations and foundations which focus on peace-related issues. These include the Professors World Peace Academy, the Women's Federation for World Peace, the Youth Federation for World Peace, the Inter-Religious Federation for World Peace, the World Media Association, the International Conference on the Unity of the Sciences, the Federation for World Peace, the Summit Council for World Peace, and the Interreligious and International Federation for World Peace.

In his own description of the vision of the Interreligious and International Federation for World Peace, Rev. Moon has proposed the development of a council of religious leaders that would work within the structure of the United Nations, serving as a complement to the almost exclusively political and economic emphasis that characterizes peacekeeping efforts among its member nations. His hope is to create over time a comprehensive and effective approach to peacemaking. In his own words,

“The time has come when cooperative and mutually supportive relationships among the world’s statesmen and religious leaders are desperately needed.... Since the root of human problems is not merely political, it follows that social and political solutions alone will always be insufficient. While most societies are politically governed, religion lies at the root of most national and cultural identities.”

– Founder’s Address, IIFWP Inaugural Assembly

The plan for the establishment of the IIFWP was first announced at a gathering of more than three hundred international delegates in Washington, D.C., on December 19, 1998. In an address that evening, Rev. Moon presented his hope to develop the IIFWP and eventually to see a council of religious leaders working within the context of the United Nations. The audience enthusiastically encouraged the development of the IIFWP.

On this foundation, the Inaugural Assembly of the IIFWP was held in Seoul, Korea, on February 6, 1999, with more than five hundred participants in attendance, including more than thirty former heads of state and government, several United Nations ambassadors, religious leaders representative of all the world's major traditions, and a wide range of scholars, scientists, journalists and artists. The co-conveners of the IIFWP's Inaugural Assembly were Dr. Ninian Smart, RI. Rowny Professor of Comparative Religion at the University of California at Santa Barbara, and Dr. Nicholas Kittrie, chairman of the Eleanor Roosevelt Institute for Justice and Peace. Dr. Smart, in his remarks to the Assembly, underscored the significance of interfaith activity in the twentieth century, while also pointing to the multitude of conflicts worldwide in which religion plays a not altogether constructive role. Dr. Kittrie, a legal scholar, emphasized the importance of the United Nations and the human rights tradition and the need for wide collaboration of all people dedicated to peace. Dr. Chung Hwan Kwak, Chairman of IIFWP, spoke of the pioneering work of Rev. Moon in promoting worldwide interfaith activities. He emphasized that religious leaders should not only guide people to the eternal world, but lead the way in providing solutions to problems in this world as well.

In his Founder's Address at the assembly, Rev. Moon outlined his vision for the IIFWP, stressing the need for political and religious leaders to work together in providing solutions to global problems. He urged the United Nations to lead the way in implementing such a system of cooperation. Mr. Giulio Murano, director of the International Human Rights Federation, as a representative of all the delegates in attendance then read a statement of support for the inauguration of the IIFWP. Following the Inaugural Assembly, Rev. and Mrs. Moon prepared calligraphy bearing the motto, "The hope of all ages is a unified world of peace."

IIFWP STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

Building on the work of diverse organizations, the IIFWP was founded to help coordinate a wide range of activities, creating a coalition of organizations and activities that together work to establish peace throughout the world. Of particular importance to the IIFWP is cooperation with other significant international organizations, especially the United Nations. It is hoped that, by bringing religious leaders and other non-governmental leaders into closer collaboration, not merely as advisors but as partners with the representatives of sovereign nations, the way to peace will be both smoother and swifter. As much wisdom, indeed power, is vested in extra-political institutions, and IIFWP seeks to harness that power and to promote reforms within the United Nations that reflect that vision.

The IIFWP is a worldwide, not-for-profit organization dedicated to the promotion of world peace through education programs, workshops, conferences and publications. IIFWP seeks to encourage and support the efforts of world leaders from all disciplines and to build coalitions among a wide range of nongovernmental, religious, cultural and educational institutions in advancing solutions to pressing world problems.

Of particular concern to the IIFWP are two serious and growing problems. The first revolves around family instability and breakdown and the serious social, economic and cultural problems that the family's decline generates. The second concerns the growing ethnic, racial and religious intolerance in all parts of the world. There is a critical need, in our opinion, for political, religious and educational institutions to work together more vigorously, not only to reverse the decline in the socially nourishing functions of the family, but also to promote greater understanding and collaboration among diverse ethnic, racial and religious communities for the common well-being of humanity.

The IIFWP supports the mission of the United Nations in pursuing peace, reconciliation and human welfare. The IIFWP intends to actively collaborate with the United Nations and other international and regional organizations similarly dedicated to the cause of achieving justice, world peace and human prosperity.

The IIFWP strongly affirms the principles of world unity and works for greater harmony, mutual respect and cooperation among the world's great religious traditions as well as among ethnic and racial communities. Overcoming religious intolerance has been one of the twentieth century's great tasks. The IIFWP promotes ongoing interreligious dialogue, as well as cooperative interreligious activism on behalf of world peace. The world's religious leaders, IIFWP maintains, have a responsibility to work not only diligently for interreligious harmony, but also in support of the ideals of the United Nations and other international, regional and non-governmental organizations dedicated to world peace.

The IIFWP supports the involvement of religious communities and organizations worldwide in cooperative efforts for global peace. The IIFWP holds, furthermore, that international efforts for world peace on the part of the United Nations and other non-governmental organizations need to be enhanced by the unique wisdom and insight of the world's great religious traditions, as well as by leaders in the arts, the sciences, the media and other disciplines. In effect, the IIFWP seeks to establish and serve a broadly based, interdisciplinary, inter-religious and international network of institutions and individuals dedicated to the tasks of local and worldwide peace.

Through diverse programs, including publications, conferences, workshops and seminars, the IIFWP seeks to serve as a bridge of peace that transcends conventional barriers of culture, language, race, religion and creed. By means of dialogue, mutual understanding, respect and commitment to service, the IIFWP is advancing the cause of world peace.

The IIFWP was founded in the hope of building a world in which peoples, cultures, races, religions and nationalities live together in harmony, mutual respect, cooperation and universal prosperity. This vision of world peace underlies all the programs and activities of the IIFWP, even though specific initiatives may pursue this quest from distinctive vantage points or in relation to a particular constituency, for example, youth, academics, religious leaders or artists.

The IIFWP recognizes that the task of achieving genuine peace requires an integrated, cross-disciplinary, and collaborative effort among all the various organizations and peoples. That is, peace cannot be established merely by academics, by politicians, or by religious leaders alone, and therefore the tendency for peace efforts to be fragmented and disunified has to be overcome.

A unique feature of the IIFWP's vision is the inclusion of the world's religious leaders, who bear the wisdom of their respective traditions, in the pursuit of peace. This affirmation of religion's contribution is fully interreligious in spirit, welcoming the participation of all the world's great religious traditions.

ASSEMBLY: 2000 STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

RENEWING THE UNITED NATIONS AND BUILDING A CULTURE OF PEACE

This September, just prior to its Millennium General Assembly, the United Nations will convene the Millennium Summit. The many heads of state and government in attendance will deliberate on the state of our world, both its problems and its possibilities, and consider ways in which, together, we might forge a brighter and more peaceful future for all. This is a significant moment in our world's history. A time to review the past. A time to form a vision for the future.

Along with the representatives of member nations, scores of non-governmental organizations, including the IIFWP will let their voices be heard at this time, offering their recommendations, proposals and unique perspectives on a variety of global issues.

The Interreligious and International Federation for World Peace will convene Assembly 2000 on August 17-20 in New York, bringing its representatives from around the world to discuss the theme, 'Renewing the United Nations and Building a Culture of Peace: Toward a New Model of Global Cooperation in Addressing Critical Issues.'

At Assembly 2000 a wide range of world leaders – representing governments, religions, the media, academia, the arts, women, youth, etc. – will gather to reflect on the ways in which the United Nations can be, in the words of the Secretary General, 'renewed,' and made more effective and relevant as it addresses critical problems in our ever-changing world.

ASSEMBLY 2000 WILL:

1. Reflect on the Secretary General's recently published "We the Peoples" report on the future of the United Nations;
2. Assess the current state of the United Nations and the way in which NGOs can participate more fully in the decision-making processes carried on at the United Nations;
3. Explore the ways in which the IIFWP might contribute to the revitalization and renewal of the United Nations;
4. Explore the ways in which IIFWP's unique perspective and vision can be communicated to the United Nations and NGO community, including the following recommendations:
 - a. Greater integration of religious and spiritual perspectives in deliberations and decisions related to the critical issues facing humanity;
 - b. Greater awareness of the profound social, moral, political and economic significance of the family;
 - c. Greater stress on the cultural factors that contribute to many of our more critical global problems;
 - d. Awareness of the need to move beyond barriers based on nationality, ethnicity, race and religion; and avoidance of all forms of discrimination and prejudice.

AFFILIATED ORGANISATIONS

Family Federation for World Peace and Unification is a network of families in 185 nations—from every race, religion and culture—united in the belief that, centered on God’s love, successful, happy families can solve the problems of every society. Through service and education, local chapters support member families and their surrounding communities. At the grassroots level, FFWPU chapters initiated a worldwide marriage and rededication movement of literally hundreds of millions of couples.

World Media Association is an international forum for media professionals and opinion leaders dedicated to advancing the highest standards of journalistic ethics, promoting press freedom in places where it does not exist, and encouraging the responsible use of that freedom where it does. Fact-finding tours and 16 World Media Conferences since 1978 have examined the media’s role in the larger context of society.

The Washington Times Foundation, established in 1984, is a not-for-profit organization devoted to encouraging the highest ideals in cultural values and public mindedness. The Foundation has developed programs, particularly in the areas of media and journalism, to promote the values of family, freedom and faith—values that have become confused and weakened in the modern era.

Literary Federation for World Peace, established in 1997, unites writers and literary scholars to promote the positive role of literature as a bridge between races, religions and traditions in forging a harmonious global culture. With distinguished presenters such as Nobel Laureates Derek Walcott and Wole Soyinka, and U.S. Poet Laureates Rita Dove and Robert Hass, the Federation explores themes such as “The Search for a New World Culture for the 21st Century.”

International Conference on the Unity of the Sciences, starting in 1972 with 20 participants, is an interdisciplinary academic forum with two enduring themes: “Science and Values” and “Unity of Knowledge.” Now a global network of distinguished scholars, ICUS takes science beyond its narrow confines to a broad appraisal of today’s problems while considering the value implications of the ends and the means of science.

Youth Federation for World Peace, a worldwide youth organization, addresses the crisis in values among today’s youth. Delegates from 164 nations inaugurated the Federation in July 1994, affirming that selfless service to others transcends all human boundaries and is rooted in recognition of God. Open to individuals 18 to 48 years of age and supportive organizations, YFWP programs include scholarships, international exchange, leadership programs, service outreach, and character education.

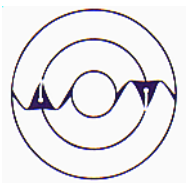

World University Federation is an international, interactive network of institutions and educators, taking full advantage of new information technologies, promoting the integral education of the whole person. The Federation believes that, to secure peace and prosperity in the new millennium, educational institutions must not only train students to be competent professionally, but also to become responsible citizens who can contribute to society and approach the world from a global perspective.

Summit Council for World Peace, founded in 1981, is an organization whose core membership is composed of former heads of state and heads of governments. The Council seeks to avail itself of the extraordinary wealth of knowledge, intelligence and goodwill of these leaders as it studies and seeks solutions to the problems of the planet. This effort has spawned initiatives to promote peace, confront world poverty, provide humanitarian relief, and develop new, equitable economic paradigms for the 21st century.

Inter-Religious Federation for World Peace has invested in the cause of world peace through inter-religious dialogue and harmony for over 20 years, led by seven presidents who are leaders from major world religions. In addition to emergency intervention to prevent the outbreak of violence or war, the IRFWP also invests in long-term dialogue and organizes interfaith pilgrimages, service projects and relief work among refugees.

Professors World Peace Academy is an interdisciplinary and intercultural network of scholars, with chapters in over a hundred countries, established to support the academic community in the quest for peace, social stability and prosperity. PWPA organizes conferences (more than 400 to date), publishes books, and produces the International Journal on World Peace.

Women's Federation for World Peace is empowering women to create peace at home and in our communities, cultures and world. WFWP seeks to focus the unique nurturing skills of women to provide leadership in conflict resolution, promote peace, provide service to those in need or crisis, and implement changes on every level of society. Granted NGO general consultative status with the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations in 1997, WFWP facilitates partnerships among women.

Martial Arts Federation for World Peace is devoted to developing the potential of the martial arts as a moral and cultural force for the attainment of world peace and harmony. Emphasizing self-discipline and respect between master and student, martial arts instructors and organizations are in a unique position to offer a constructive alternative to the hedonism and self-centered values of today's world.
